

TURN RIGHT, SWING LEFT

STRAIGHTEN YOUR SHOTS BY SHAPING YOUR SWING

You can't stop losing shots out to the right.

THE PROBLEM

Your backswing is too steep and you don't get enough turn in your shoulders. As a result, you swing down too steeply and cut across the ball, creating left-to-right spin and shots that slice. This problem is most evident with your driver—because it's so long it creates the least backspin and the highest rate of sidespin.

THE SOLUTION

To solve your slicing woes, you need to do three basic things in your swing that you're not doing now. Make these simple moves and your shots will immediately fly straighter. Here's what to do:

TURN RIGHT

On your backswing, think "turn to the right," meaning you will turn your right shoulder behind you and take the club with you when you turn. This will get your club slightly to the inside and your body nicely rotated behind the ball.

SWING RIGHT

On your downswing, think "swing to the right," meaning you will try to swing the club out to the right side of the target. This promotes an inside-out swing path, which is critical to beating your slice.

FINISH LEFT

As you swing past impact, think "turn to the left." Making this final move will get your belt buckle facing the target and will further promote right-to-left spin and shots that fly straight or even with a bit of a draw.

DAN PASQUARIELLO
Pebble Beach Golf Academy, Pebble Beach, Ca.
(Top 100 since 2007)

WATCH IT! Video at golf.com/slice and on our tablet editions.